LOOKING FOR A home where they could share their best years—and welcome their grown children and grandchildren who love to come to visit—these homeowners thought they struck gold when they found their quiet lakeside retreat. Before moving in, however, they realized the new abode fell just short of perfection and began a home renovation mission that included the complete gut and remodel of the kitchen. Such a task is not embarked upon easily, but luckily, the couple found their rehab savior in the Fisher Design Team at the Countertop Shoppe.

To fully showcase the home's spectacular view, the Fisher Design Team began the remodel by arranging the island placement, so the homeowners could look out over the lake while working and eating. They then downsized the less attractive street-side window by disguising it behind a glass panel. Additional glass shelves further mask the window while providing creative storage space—a genius idea from the president of Jay Rambo Co., the company providing the cabinetry.

Since the owners loved entertaining and hosting their family for long weekends, the designers installed a two-burner induction cooktop to the right of the galley sink and a dishwasher to the left, making the island fully functional and perfect for carrying out hosting duties. The galley sink also features upper and lower tiers, providing sliding accessories such as an extra faucet, a colander, cutting boards, and condiment trays.

These subtle touches keep all the homeowners' hard work behind the scenes, allowing them and their guests to soak in and enjoy the kitchen's state-of-the-art Thermador appliances, stunning Nero Orion honed granite countertops, and gorgeous outdoor views. «
